Frederick Douglass Day

On behalf of the Town of Easton, the Talbot County Free Library and the Frederick Douglass Honor Society, we welcome you to our annual Frederick Douglass Day. This is a proud day for the citizens of Easton, Talbot County and the Frederick Douglass Day Committee as they have long-labored to deliver this grand event filled with history, education, adventure, and entertainment.

Today, we honor Frederick Douglass, a man born into slavery in Talbot County. He had no formal education but taught himself to read and write. Indeed, ‘once you learn to read,’ he says, ‘you will forever be free.’ After his escape, Douglass soon became a powerful voice for freedom and equality, and a valued friend and advisor to President Abraham Lincoln. A U.S. Marshal, an Ambassador, and during the Republican National Convention in 1888, he was the first African-American to have his name placed into nomination for President of the United States.

Although he was born a slave, he died a statesman. His compassion for humanity, unyielding advocacy for justice, and intellectual prose writings continue to shape our nation today. “We have to do with the past as we can make it useful to the present and future” - Frederick Douglass.

We hope you enjoy today’s celebration of the life and legacy of our native son Frederick Douglass,

Eric Lowery

Frederick Douglass

The man we know as Frederick Douglass was born Frederick Augustus Washington Bailey in Talbot County, MD, February 1818. His mother, a slave named Harriet Bailey, gave birth to him in the cabin of her mother Betsey Bailey, also a slave but whose husband Isaac was free. The cabin was in a small ravine on Tuckahoe Creek near what is now called the village of Cordova. Frederick's mother soon returned to the farm where she worked, and he only saw her a few times thereafter. She died when he was eight years old. His earliest years were spent with his grandparents Isaac and Betsey Bailey.

In 1824, at the age of six, Frederick and his grandmother walked twelve miles to Wye House plantation where his owner Aaron Anthony was employed as an overseer. Anthony died within two years and Frederick was transferred to the possession of Thomas Auld, Anthony's son-in-law. He was sent by Auld's wife to her sister-in-law Sophia Auld in Fells Point, Baltimore, to be a companion to the son of Hugh and Sophia. Frederick was recognized as a gifted child, and Sophia began to teach him to read, although doing so was illegal. Her husband stopped the lessons, saying that if a slave was taught to read he would no longer be satisfied to remain a slave, words that Frederick overheard and took to heart. He continued to read in secret. He bought "The Columbian Orator," memorizing the speeches and practicing oratory.

"I had as well be killed running as die standing."

Frederick was returned to the Eastern Shore when his services were no longer needed in Baltimore. By then, Colonel Lloyd, owner of the Wye House plantation, owned Frederick. The young man organized a weekly Sunday school, teaching other slaves to read the New Testament. Within a short time, several slave owners discovered this forbidden activity and broke up the meetings. Frederick tried to escape his master several times and was severely punished. After one such attempt, the escape plot was discovered and Frederick was tied and led behind a team of horses to the county jail in Easton. Ultimately, his master returned him to Baltimore to learn the trade of ship caulking. In 1838, he managed his successful escape with help from friends. To avoid being discovered and returned to slavery, Frederick stopped using the last name Bailey and called himself Frederick Johnson. He later changed his last name again to Douglass, choosing to spell Douglass with a slight difference – a double "s".

"Once you learn to read, you will forever be free."

Frederick and his wife Anna had five children; three sons and two daughters. He became a licensed preacher in the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, and he began to attend abolitionist meetings. Thus began the career of a great orator, editor, author, suffragist, reformer, statesman and advisor to Presidents. In 1878, in sharp contrast to his beginning in Talbot County, Douglass returned to Easton and spoke at the Courthouse, Asbury U. M. Church and Bethel A.M.E. Church as an accomplished and respected leader.

He died February 20, 1895, both nationally and internationally acclaimed as one of the most influential men of his century.

"I know of no soil better adapted to the growth of reform than American soil. I know of no country where the conditions for affecting great changes in the settled order of things, for the development of right ideas of liberty and humanity, are more favorable than here in these United States."

SPEAKERS

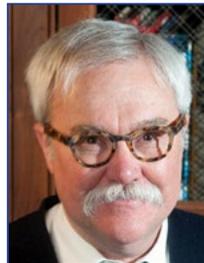

Kenneth M. Morris, Jr. is descended from two of the most important names in American history: he is the great-great-grandson of Frederick Douglass and the great-great-grandson of Booker T. Washington. He is also the President of the public charity, Frederick Douglass Family Initiatives, which uses education in schools across the U.S. to address and prevent contemporary forms of slavery or human trafficking. Aside from his work in schools, Ken has been featured in the media on CNN, Democracy Now!, USA Today, PBS, NPR, the 2015 History Channel documentary Blood and Glory: The Civil War in Color, and in the National Geographic documentaries Civil Warriors (2011) and Rise Up: The Legacy of Nat Turner (2016). His speaking engagements include Columbia University, Morehouse College, Tuskegee University, Virginia Tech, Yale University and the United Nations.

Dr. Mark Leone has been the Director of Anthropology at the University of Maryland since 1981. His work in Annapolis continues to serve the needs of historic preservation in the city through scientific and scholarly work of undergraduates and doctoral students in the department under his direction. Since 2000, Dr. Leone has also directed research on Maryland's Eastern Shore at William Paca's 1792 plantation on Wye Island, as well as the Wye House Plantation where Frederick Douglass was enslaved as a child. He was a former assistant professor of Anthropology at Princeton University (1968 - 1975). His education includes Ph.D. Anthropology, University of Arizona; M.A. Anthropology, University of Arizona; B.A. History, Tufts University.

Dale Glenwood Green is a Professor of Architecture and Planning at Morgan State University. Green earned a Bachelor's of Science in Architecture and Environmental Design from Morgan State University, a Masters of Architecture and Historic Preservation from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign. Professor Green was honored as the recipient of two Maryland Preservation Awards (the Education and Community Engagement award and the Preservation Partnerships for Project Excellence award). Green continues to work on the research, archaeological findings, and documentation unveiling the significant history of "The Hill", believed to be the oldest Free African American Community in the nation. Green leads a self-guided tour of "The Hill" at 4pm.

Dr. Lorenzo L. Hughes is a lifelong educator with over twenty-one years in education. He has been a teacher, assistant principal, principal, and assistant superintendent. He earned a Bachelor of Arts in English Education from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, a Master of Education in School Leadership and Instruction from Wilmington College (now Wilmington University), and a Doctor of Philosophy in Organizational Leadership from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore, a Master of Education from the University of Maryland Eastern Shore. Dr. Hughes is best characterized as a transformational leader who believes, like Sheryl Sandberg, COO of Facebook, "Leadership is about making others better as a result of your presence and making sure that impact lasts in your absence."

Bill Peak of the Talbot County Free Library is the author of The Oblates' Confession.

Joseph Prud'homme, Moderator for the "The New Form of Slavery: The Crisis of Human Trafficking". Prud'homme (Ph.D. Princeton University) is the Founding Director of the Institute for Religion, Politics and Culture at Washington College and Associate Professor of Political Science. The Institute explores the historic and on-going contributions of religious communities and leaders, and other men and women of moral courage, to political and cultural flourishing, in the United States and around the world.

Steven J. Hess, Panelist, currently serves as the law enforcement coordinator and victim-witness manager for the United State Attorney's Office for the District of Maryland. Hess also serves as a liaison and coordinator with federal, state, and local law enforcement and homeland security agencies in matters involving the federal prosecutor-including programmatic responsibilities for DOJ initiatives - including the Anti-Terrorism Advisory Council, Project Safe Neighborhoods, Maryland EXILE, Human Trafficking, and Project Safe Childhood - law enforcement training; information and intelligence sharing; and problem-solving. He oversees the coordination and delivery of services for federal crime victims and witnesses in the federal District of Maryland.

Michelle Harding, Panelist, serves as the Senior Leader of the Church of the King in Easton, MD, which she co-founded in January 2012. An ordained Minister, she has served as Sr. Pastor, Associate Pastor, and Youth Pastor with over twenty years experience in the ministry. Pastor Michelle is also the Founder and President of Life by Design, a ministry that focuses on seeing people of all ages discover their God-given design and purpose. Through workshops, and individual coaching, she is able to help to propel people beyond their perceived limits and step into the next level of life.

Ed Thomas, Panelist, serves as co-chair of the Eastern Shore Trafficking Task Force and as Anti-Human Trafficking Coordinator, Aglow Mid-Atlantic. In these capacities, Ed arranges workshops, makes presentations, researches, prepares and distributes information and contributes to websites to make the public and leaders aware of and getting them involved to prevent and stop human trafficking.

FREDERICK DOUGLASS' CANE

The National Park Service is lending a cane from the Frederick Douglass National Historic Site. Douglass received the cane in 1882 as gift to memorialize John Brown's legacy to abolish slavery. The cane is made of oak wood from John Brown's house, where Douglass visited and interviewed John Brown before he led the raid on the military arsenal in Harpers Ferry, West Virginia on October 16th, 1859.

The Talbot County Free Library has a speech by Douglass about John Brown that will also be on display.

"The true question is, Did John Brown draw his sword against slavery and thereby lose his life in vain? And to this I answer ten thousand times, No! No man fails, or can fail, who so grandly gives himself and all he has to a righteous cause. No man, who in his hour of extremest need, when on his way to meet an ignominious death, could so forget himself as to stop and kiss a little child, one of the hated race for whom he was about to die, could by any possibility fail.

ARTWORKS FOR FREEDOM

The Anonime (Anonymous) Series, by the Albanian artist Brikena Boci, is a collection of fourteen hand-embroidered faces of women who she has memorialized in her own way. At the age of 16, Brikena and her family found themselves helping refugees and hearing their stories, which made a huge impact on the artists' soul. Many of these women during and after the war in Kosovo in 1998-1999 found themselves as refugees in Albania. This middle European country was in economic ruin when it emerged from communism in 1992. High rates of poverty and unemployment, a crumbling infrastructure, and corrupt elected officials made the nation a fertile ground for child trafficking, prostitution, and forced labor. Women and girls, lured by false promises of marriage or legitimate employment, often wound up being kidnapped and forced to work as sex slaves. According to Boci, these women's stories need to be told and for the artist it was a healing process of her youth and allows her to engage her audience in a conversation about both the personal and sociopolitical experiences she has had. The exhibit is on loan to the Talbot County Free Library through October 27 from Artworks for Freedom.

Freedom Still Has A Price

In late 1846, abolitionist and Quaker Mary Richardson of England wrote to slave owner Hugh Auld in Baltimore asking if Frederick Bailey's freedom had a price. Auld replied that he would manumit Frederick for £150, or $711.66.

Richardson and other abolitionists on both sides of the Atlantic raised the money, and on Dec. 5, 1846, Auld filed Douglass's deed of manumission – literally, “releasing the hand of authority”– in Baltimore Co.

The Frederick Douglass Honor Society
Mission Statement:

"The Frederick Douglass Honor Society is dedicated to developing programs that continue the Douglass legacy of human rights, education, personal growth, and involvement of citizens."

Our goal is to honor Frederick Douglass here in his birthplace, Talbot County, Maryland, where his experiences in his youth – both positive and negative – helped form his character, intellect and determination. It became Frederick Douglass's life goal to bring black people, and America, away from the ancient institution of slavery.

It is our hope that Frederick Douglass will be seen as a true leader by all Americans. His brilliant oratory and his influence both here and abroad helped black people and our country through one of the most difficult and painful struggles in our history. He is known, honored and respected around the world; we believe he should be considered among the foremost of our many American heroes. A statue of him in his birthplace is a beginning...
